Happy easter sunday 2021

Two words: Marshmallow. Reese's. Earlier this month, word leaked that Hershey's could be introducing what might be the best Reese's peanut butter cup innovation in quite some time: mallow-top cups. Equal parts milk chocolate, creamy peanut butter, and marshmallow-flavored creme, this new Reese's cup promised to combine two top Easter candies—Peeps and Reese's peanut butter cups. Lucky for us, the chocolatiers at the Hershey's, Pa.-based company just confirmed that these marshmallow-topped cups will be arriving in spring 2021. Now that's a reason to hop for joy! "This Easter, our star is the Reese's Mallow-Top Peanut Butter Cup," Michael Reese, Senior Brand Manager, Holiday, said in a press release. "We've reimagined the classic Reese's Cup by combining the top Easter flavors, milk chocolate, marshmallow, and delicious Reese's peanut butter, all into one amazing cup. Yes, it's as good as it sounds." While these peanut butter cups may get the majority of the attention, they're only one of several new Easter candy announcements made by Hershey's today. You don't want to miss these other new items: Hershey's Milk Chocolate Pip Bunny Hershey's decided to settle the debate — which part of the chocolate bunny do you eat first, the ears or the body? — with the biggest set of ears possible. And did you know the rectangles of a Hershey's milk chocolate bar have a name? They're called Pips, so the new Hershey's Milk Chocolate Pip Bunny is a cute, cheerful chocolate bunny with extra-long Pips, er, ears. When you're craving something sweet, you can pop a Pip off the bunny's ears. Hershey's Milk Chocolate Build-A-Bunny For the holidays, Hershey's introduced fun and interactive build-a-snowman and build-a-Santa chocolate bars, and for Easter, they've reinvented it with Hershey's Milk Chocolate Build-A-Bunny. Just like the larger chocolate bunny, this bar has Pip ears, but you'll need to break apart more than the ears to align the bunny's body. It's as much a game as it is a sweet snack. Ice Breakers Strawberry Lemonade Ducklin The last new release for Easter 2021 is a tart-sweet chewing gum release: Ice Breakers Strawberry Lemonade in a darling duckling container. How cute will this sugar-free gum pack look tucked into an Easter basket? Like these other Easter candies, this duckling will wander off soon after the season ends, so grab one while you can. A few other fun and recent Easter candy releases will be back in 2021. Hopping back for another year will be Reese's Peanut Butter Unboxed Bunny and Hershey's Milk Chocolate Unbox Bunny. These 4.25-ounce bunnies are the perfect addition to baskets (or to sneak into your office drawer for a little nibble when you need an afternoon sweet snack). My personal favorite returning item is the Reese's Pieces Shake N' Break. These hollow chocolate eggs are filled with Reese's Pieces, and you have to beat them (with your hand, a mallet, a solid chocolate bunny, you decide) to crack open the candies for the surprise inside. Lastly, but most certainly not least, Kit Kat is bringing back the Lemon Crisp flavor, a seriously delicious wafer treat that's coated with a sweet-tart citrusy white creme. First introduced in 2020, these Kit Kats are a bright spot in the sea of seasonal treats. But, like any good limited-edition seasonal candy, these will go fast, and stores aren't likely to restock if they sell out, so snatch up what you want when you see it. Look for these on shelves after Valentine's Day. Easter isn't just for the kids anymore — especially when you put a grown-up spin on the day's festivities. There are plenty of things to do on Easter if you're an adult and a lot of these activities involve getting back in touch with your inner child.The best thing about being an adult is that you make decisions for yourself now. You can dress yourself in any color on Sunday. You can pass on those spring peas you never really liked. You can even make your own Easter feast without supervision should you so please. And perhaps the best thing about being an adult is the limitless amount of candy you sometimes allow yourself to indulge in. The possibilities for adult activities on Easter, which happens to be Sunday, Apr. 4, are endless. And they're pretty much the grown up versions of all the kiddie stuff you loved to partake in around this time of year anyways. All it takes is a creative spin to make your Easter both safe and fun. Whether you're organizing festivities for you and those you're quarantined with or gathering your closest friends via Zoom for a pastel and mimosa brunch, there is no shortage of ~adulting~ on Easter.1Peet Snyder / EyeEm/EyeEm/Getty ImagesHide and go seek is no longer just for kids and bored babysitters. Turns out, this age-old Easter game is actually... ageless. While you can't really go on an egg hunt with everyone you want to, you can still plan home-based egg hunts for family members you're quarantined with. Hide eggs in cereal boxes, in book shelves, and behind desks. Let the inner child in you out to play while also keeping it adult.2If you're not so much into looking around the lawn for plastic eggs, stock up on pastel colors and give yourself an at-home spa manicure and pedicure. You an even video chat with your best friends and have a virtual mani-pedi party. Taking care of your cuticles is a form of self-love, which is very adult of you.3Easter isn't all about the chocolate, but there are so many recent chocolate candy releases revolving around it that it sort of seems like it is. Curate a bar of chocolate candies to indulge in.4It's decorating eggs, but competitive. If you're quarantined with other people, challenge them to the task. If not, you can always have this contest via Zoom or Facetime. Whether you're competing against friends or family, get your watercolors ready to win. Instead of just dipping eggs into dye, get creative and paint a masterpiece. Winner gets bragging rights for the rest of the year, and one heck of an Instagram.5Beyond chocolate, there is a special haul of Easter candy that is delivered to the candy aisle. It would be down right wrong to ignore these special candies. Do the responsible, adult thing and gather all the candy. Create a very professional tasting sheet and get to being a pro Easter candy taste tester. Make it more interactive by video chatting with friends and encouraging them to try the same candies. Compare your answers at the end to see which candy is the overall winner.6If you don't want to hunt for the eggs, you don't have to, because you are an adult. But, plastic eggs are not reserved for the 12 years old and younger crowd. Plan a video chat with friends you want to play with and have everyone write up their own truth or dare notes to put inside Easter eggs. Then, you can each pull out truths or dares for each other to play with. Playing online might limit you a little, but it doesn't have to limit your fun.7MelanieMaya/E+/Getty ImagesWhat is more adult than brunch? And while you may not be able to see your brunch buddies in person this year, you can always have a great Zoom brunch for your and your friends. Pour the mimosas and whip up the quiche. While the kids are chasing after bunnies, relax into your chair with a plate full of fresh fruit and pastries.8Each holiday calls for its own on-theme makeup look, and Easter is no exception. Play with pastels, egg-designs, and other Easter-inspired looks. Not only will it help you get into the Easter mood, but it'll also result in a super cute Instagram post for later.9Being an adult means you can wear anything you want to. Get especially dressed up in your Sunday best for this year's Easter dinner. In fact make it a thing with your friends and family that you're quarantined with. If you're tuning in with friends via video chat, you can always turn the feast into a full-blown virtual fashion show.10Get in the spirit of baking with a virtual cake bake-off. From carrots to Peep-inspired layers, bake and decorate a cake as Easter-y as you can. While you can't taste test your friends' cakes, you can always judge the competition based on presentation. We are all winners in this low-key competition that results in many each person having a whole cake to themselves.11Sometimes the best way to celebrate a holiday is by spreading good. Donate to your favorite organization or cause to make this year really special. Now that's an adult activity.12Whether you choose it's the Easter Beagle, Charlie Brown or Hop, one way you can get in the Easter mood is by watching one of your favorite wholesome Easter movies. And if you want to watch with friends, start a Netflix Party or have an Easter Zoom movie night.13You don't have to fill baskets for your adult friends with kid friendly gifts. But instead try grown up Mad Libs, and other adult things, whatever that means to you. You might not be able to deliver to them yet, so it might be a great idea to fill the basket with non-perishables and fun things your friends will appreciate once you can finally see them in person.14While every other Easter was probably spent doing a lot of cooking, cleaning, and preparing for guests, social distancing makes it so you don't have to set up for people coming to your house. Instead of getting carried away in the hustle and bustle of hosting guests, you can take it slow this year. Relax at home, think about what you're grateful for, and enjoy the holiday at your own pace.15VICUSCHKA/Moment/Getty ImagesNow that flowers are in bloom, get together with your most botanical buds online to create floral arrangements for your Easter dinner tables.16You know what's super grown up? Sending out actual cards on holidays! While the pandemic may be keeping you from seeing your favorite family and friends on this holiday, you can still make the holiday meaningful by writing up and mailing Easter cards. Not only will it be a fun opportunity to work on your hand-writing, but your loved ones will really enjoy the kind gesture. If you live in the Midwest, you've likely been to a Meijer grocery store more than a few times in your life. And, with Easter approaching on Sunday, April 4, you might even have a trip scheduled this week. While many folks like to get their grocery shopping done ahead of time, unexpected events can arise, pushing off what we had planned to do the day (or days) before. But, when it comes to Easter shopping, you'll want to make sure that the supermarket will actually be open should such an event arise. After all, nothing's worse than waiting until the last minute only to find that everything is closed (been there, done that).All this is to say... Is Meijer Open on Easter Sunday? Unlike many stores that don't make big announcements surrounding their store hours, Meijer likes to help take the guesswork out of it by releasing a statement on its Easter Sunday hours. While they've yet to make their announcement this year, TODAY.com reports that Meijer will be open for Easter 2021. However, you should anticipate modified hours, and, of course, check your local store before heading over.Here's hoping this helps to alleviate any last-minute stress surrounding your Easter preparation plans. And, to help reduce any other lingering holiday stress, allow us to inspire your grocery list. Whether you'd like to host an Easter party or Easter dinner, we've got plenty of recipes to help you dish up the most delicious holiday meal—including Easter cookies and even Easter cocktails to help tide you and your family over between meals. You may be able to find more information about this and similar content at piano.io While Easter may likely still look a little different at our homes this year, one stalwart helper is going to be there to assist: Walmart is open this Easter 2021. With the busyness of everyday life combined with the unusual circumstances of this (and last) year, knowing that there's a store you can pop over to (whether masked and in person or via pick-up and delivery) is a relief. (Here are your need-to-know dates for Easter 2021 and Lent 2021!)Though it's too early to tell if our gatherings will need to remain smaller and/or virtual this year due to Covid-19, we hope you're still taking the time to celebrate with your immediate family (even a virtual Easter egg hunt rather than an in-person gathering can be fun!) and serving up some Easter brunch ideas or Easter dinner recipes on a smaller scale. But if you wake up on the day of and realize you forgot a must-have item (or a few), don't panic. Because as you search for your keys and think about places to shop that don't break the bank, Walmart is probably one of the retailiers that comes to mind. This content is imported from (embed-name). You may be able to find the same content in another format, or you may be able to find more information, at their web site. Walmart will be open for its regular hours on Easter, from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. To check the schedule of your local superstore, simply head on over to Walmart's website and search in its store locator.Now, if Walmart is all the way across town, or if you just want to weigh your options before you head out, there are a handful of other stores open on Easter if you'd like to pick up something already cooked.Of course, if you need to fuel up first, you can pop over to your favorite chain coffee shop, since Starbucks's Easter hours show it will be open. We would say to sit back and relax, but we know that's not going to happen on the holiday! So before you stress about not being able to pick up forgotten items for your Sunday celebration, Walmart will be there to save the day. From bunny-themed books and puzzle toys to adorable plushies and personalized keepsakes they can hold onto forever (and even some cute accessories they can wear on Easter and beyond), your children are sure to love seeing what the Easter Bunny's left in their baskets. And if you do want to leave the kids some sugary treats, we've gathered some fun ways to dress them up, too. Our editors independently research, test, and recommend the best products; you can learn more about our review process here. We may receive commissions on purchases made from our chosen links. Easter is right around the corner, and that means that hollowed out chocolate bunnies, plastic eggs, overfilled baskets, and pastel colors will soon be taking over everywhere you look. While there's something nostalgic about all of the above, they're not exactly the best gifts for anyone over the age of ten. Live plants, gardening tools, and gift baskets laden with goodies are all more personal ways to show someone that you're thinking about them this Easter. Plus, they're also a great way to lift the spirits as we head into the warmer months (and we could all use some of that this year). Here, the best Easter gifts that are thoughtful, not cheesy. The prayer plant gets its name from the way its leaves fold, resembling hands folded in prayer—a perfect sentiment for Easter. This plant has dark green leaves with centers of light green and red veins, giving it an artistic vibe that levels up any space. Plus, it's really easy to take care of and is even pet-friendly, so you can send it to anyone on your list whether they have a green thumb or not. This compact plant will be anywhere from 7-12 inches tall, and includes a recycled plastic pot available in five colors—stone, clay, charcoal, slate, and indigo. Whether it's a traditional Easter egg hunt or a meal with loved ones, Easter is full of memory-making moments—and what better way to remember them than with photos? While iPhone photos may be the standard choice, a disposable camera is a throwback option that'll capture all the fun. Designed in collaboration with EEEEEEEEEEE and Outsiders Division, this camera has a vibrant, patchwork style that's sure to make anyone smile whether it's for a photo or not. The camera includes a 17-inch strap and can take 27 photos, so you can get shots of everything. There's nothing quite like receiving a handwritten note in the mail, especially when it's written on a pretty piece of stationery. Take this notecard set for example, which features a delicate floral design that's sure to put a smile on anyone's face. The 7 x 5-inch notecards start in sets of ten, but can include up to 1,000 per set. Each notecard has a warm-white hue and a matte eggshell finish that complements the botanical design perfectly. Plus, you can even customize the set with the recipient's name for a more personal touch. Whether they're a longtime gardener or just getting started, your loved one will appreciate edn's SmallGarden. True to its name, this garden is compact, making it easy to grow herbs, vegetables, and other plants on your countertop so spring is in the air all year long. The SmallGarden includes a power adapter and ten basil SeedPods, so the recipient can get started right away. Plus, it's made of real walnut, so it also doubles as décor. There's something about Easter that makes you feel all warm and sunny, and what better way to celebrate the season than with this set of four classic gardening tools? This set, which includes a standard trowel, transplanting trowel, weeding fork, and daisy grubber, is the perfect Easter gift for any aspiring (or well-versed) gardener. Each tool is made from solid steel and finished with an ash wood handle, a combination that's as beautiful as it is durable. And everything is presented in a beautiful box for easy gifting. Easter is the perfect time for the cook of the family to whip up an old family recipe—that's assuming they can find it, of course. To ensure the family favorites stay intact, consider gifting this stunning recipe tin from Rifle Paper Co. Available in four vibrant floral patterns, this recipe tin is the perfect way to keep track of beloved recipes in an old-school way. In addition to the tin, you'll also get 24 recipe cards and 12 dividers, so everything will stay organized between meals. When it's not in use, the lucky recipient can easily store it in a cabinet, although they'll probably want to leave it out on the counter. Made in Brooklyn with 100 percent soy wax and essential oil-infused fragrance, the Sweet Fig Minimalist Candle throws the refreshing scent of freshly picked fig that's sure to brighten up any room. Like all of Brooklyn Candle Studio's candles, this one is vegan, cruelty-free, phthalate-free, and petroleum-free, so you can let it burn bright, stress-free. When the candle isn't lit, it still makes for a decorative accent thanks to its minimal glass jar holder—which can easily be repurposed when it's burnt out. It's almost the season for fresh berries, whether you go pick them yourself or grab them from your local farmers' market, and the Joan Berry Basket adds a touch of whimsy to any kitchen table. With its bright coloring and lattice-inspired design, this ceramic basket is a fun way to wash, store, and display fresh berries. And since it's handcrafted, each piece is totally unique. We could all use a little more self-care, and the Moments of Relaxation Spa Tower is a thoughtful way to gift some pampering to someone you care about. It contains a one-size-fits-all kimono-style waffle robe, an exfoliating glove, a pumice stone, and an array of cucumber melon spa products, like body butter, body lotion, and sugar scrub, so your recipient can easily wash away a tough day. There's also a box of relaxation green tea from Tazo, the perfect combination for a Sunday sip and soak. If you have a gardener on your list, this small watering can is a stylish way to take care of their plant babies. It's crafted from galvanized steel and has a glossy white finish with a wooden handle that warms up the look and allows it to easily double as a décor piece. The recipient can use it for watering small to medium-sized plants, or arrange some dried stems in it to add some earthy elements to their space. Lilies are the unofficial symbol of Easter, so they're a safe, yet inspired, Easter gift choice. This Casablanca arrangement from The Bouqs Co. blends white lilies, white ranunculus, and snapdragon blooms with fresh salal greenery. You can choose from two vases—a farmhouse-inspired mason vase or a white signature vase that completes the bright and airy look—and three arrangement sizes, from 12 to 36 blooms. The flowers are available for a one-time purchase, but if you really want to spoil the lucky recipient you can even send them as a monthly subscription—they'll get a deluxe bouquet of 24 stems each month and you'll score major brownie points. With its hand painted floral design and delicate initial monogram, this botanical mug will have your gift recipient sipping in style this spring. There are several different designs that give the ceramic stoneware a dainty vibe, but it's rugged enough to stand up to the dishwasher for easy cleaning. If you want to add on to your gift, you can also get matching kitchenware, like dessert plates, a serving bowl, or a pitcher. Easter wouldn't be complete without an Easter basket, and this chocolate-filled option from Zoe's Chocolates is overflowing with high-end versions of childhood favorites. The basket includes nine chocolate truffles decorated with bunnies, chicks, and flowers, as well as a chocolate bar infused with jelly beans. There's also a variety of chocolate bunnies, from mini to large, made of Swiss dark and milk chocolates. Each treat is handcrafted by chocolatiers, and the basket contains more than one pound of chocolate total. Now that's a gift that keeps on giving. The Urban Leaf Herb Starter Kit has everything you need to start a herb garden. The kit includes a curated selection of seeds, like sweet basil, cilantro, dill, mint, oregano, and thyme, that are specially chosen for their ability to survive indoors and/or in small spaces. You also get soil starting discs, bamboo labels, and a detailed planting and germination guide. After sprouting, the herbs can be transferred to indoor pots or planted outside for an impressive outdoor herb garden. Fresh flowers are good, but dried flower stems can be even better—especially if you're searching for an Easter gift for someone who has trouble keeping live plants alive. This beautiful assortment includes your choice of 25 or 50 short-or long-stem flowers and two stems of greenery that'll sit pretty anywhere in your home. Each arrangement is completely unique and chosen according to the local harvest, so the options change with the season. They're ideal for displaying in vases, making dried stem bouquets, or creating hair crowns and floral wreaths—part of the gift is that the lucky recipient gets to choose just how to use them.
