Conditional past: I would have gone there yesterday. There are four basic types of conditional phrases in the English language. Conditional Zero (Type 0): I take my umbrella if it rains. First conditioned (type 1): I'll call you if I work until late. Second conditional (type 2): if the bus did not arrive in time, I would You go to the airport. Third conditioning (type 3): she would not have come if I had not invited her. Conditional phrases zero (type 0) the conditional zero describes situations always true. If you have the same meaning as when or always. If I go to school, I get up to seven. (Whenever I go to school, I get up at the same time.) If you park your car on double yellow lines, you pay a fine. (Whenever you park illegally, you pay a fine.) We use the simple tense gift in both main clauses and clausules if clauses. First conditional phrases (type 1) The first conditioned phrases are used to speculate about possible situations that can actually happen in the present or in the future. We do not use the IF Claim to describe future activities (compare it to time clauses). If he studies hard, he will pass on the exams. If we pick up the 10.15 train, we'll get on time. If you do not get the ticket, what will you do? We do if CLAUSULAS with SE + tense and main clauses with Will + Bare Infinitive. Second conditional phrases (type 2) in the second conditional phrases, we speculate about situations that will probably never happen in the present or in the future. If I had more time, it would help you. (But I'm not free at the moment. I can not help you). If I won a million dollars, I would start a business of mine. (But I know it is not realistic.) We do if clauses with whether + tense and main clauses could be infinitive. Note: The verb can be specific in the IF Claim. If I were rich, I would not work. If he was younger, he would marry her. (But it is also possible: If I were rich, I would not work. If he was younger, he would marry her.) But, if I were you, I would not do that. (In this expression, they were much more usual than it was.) The main difference between the first conditionee and the second conditional is about probability: the first conditioned is realistic, the second conditional is unrealistic. Sometimes we can use the two with the following difference in the meaning. If I see him, I'll tell him. (I suppose I'll see you, because we go to the same school.) If I saw him, I would tell him. (I do not think I'll see you, because he's sick.) If I need his help, I'll call you. (It is likely that I will need your help) if I needed your help, I would call you. (It is not very likely that I need your help). Sometimes we should use the first conditioner or the second condition to make it clear that the situation is real or unreal. If you get up late, you'll miss your bus. (A real situation.) If I came from your country, I would understand your problems. (An unreal situation - I am not your country.) Third conditional phrases (type 3) Conditional phrases lands always refer to the past. We speculate about situations that happened or did not happen in the past. If I had won a million, I would have started a business of mine. (But I did not get anything.) If he met her, he would have told her. (Unfortunately, he did not know her.) If we had not been practiced, we will not have won the match. (But we practice and won.) We do if CLAUSULAS with SE + PERFECT and main clauses with Faria + Perfect Infinitive (TER + PRINT PARTICIPATION). Other forms of the basic structures described above, we can also make different combinations. Examples - Type 1: If you finished your dinner, you can ask for the account. If you're feeling tired, rest. If he is a good skier, he can do this. If you want to be thin, you should eat less. If you know, could you inform me? Examples-type 2: If I knew his address, I could see him. If we were from Fans, we will be lying on a beach now. Why are we watching this movie? If we were watching the news, it would be more interesting. Examples - Type 3: NOS money. If we had saved some money, we could have bought the house. She was not there and I was not sitting next to her. But if she was there, I'd be sitting next to Side I was looking at the trees when I fell from the bike. If I was not looking at the trees, I would not have fallen from the bike. Mixed conditional in the mixed conditional phrases that we can combine the second and third condition. If he had left immediately, he would be here now. (He did not leave immediately and it's not here.) If I had studied hard when I was young, I would not be a doorman now. (I did not study and I'm a doorman.) If we had not told him the way as he was preparing for his journey, he would be lost now. (We told him and he is not lost.) Inverted conditioned, we can also make conditional phrases, altering the word order in the IF Claus. He had booked the hotel room, he had not slept in the camp. (If he had booked ...) I was in his position, I would accept it. (If I were ...) this is less common, quite formal and is mainly used in writing. Note, if it is the most frequent expression in the claits, but other expressions are also possible: even if, supplied (which), unless, in the condition (which), what. Examples: You're going to leave tonight, even if you do not want to. You can have your birthday party as long as you do not be noisy. Let's sell you the ranch in the condition that you pay in cash. Unless you do something, she will not come back. (If you do not do anything, ...))
