Mr Martin is working a firm called F & S for twenty-two years. He is known to be a very concentrated and efficient worker, who never smokes nor drinks, and has two assistants, Miss Paired and Mr Hart. All his life, he has been devoting himself to the company F & S.James Thurber (middle)One day, a new worker, who was the special advisor of one of the presidents Mr Fitweiler, was employed. It was a woman of the name Miss Barrows. She has been reordering the whole firm and that's why, many people have been fired or quitted their work, there. Mr Martin sees her as a threat to the company and he made a plan, a very well-thought-out plan (he went over it hundredth of times and took every possible risk into account) to kill Miss Barrows.One late evening, he was at her apartment, ready for the kill. But when he got there, he realized that his plan is crazy. Miss Barrows was preparing him and herself a drink and Mr Martin let it be and took a sip of his vodka-soda mixture. He also took out his cigarettes (he smokes secretly) and lit one. He began to tell weird things to Miss Barrows, such as blowing up Mr Fitweiler, insulting him and so on. Miss Barrows was shocked by the things she heard him say and told him to go home. At the door, he made untypical gestures like placing the index finger in front of his mouth and saying to her she must not say anything to Mr Fitweiler.The next day, Miss Barrows told everything to Mr Fitweiler. Of course, he did not believe her as she was speaking very nervously and Mr Martin is his best worker and the things she told to him are too untypical for Mr Martin. Mr Martin went to Mr Fitweiler's office. The president of the company told Mr Martin what weird things Miss Barrows was claiming he did. He asked Mr Martin where he has been last night and he answered that he was at Mr Scharfft's (who was the other president of the company F & S), which he really did and that he had a walk, read a magazine and fell asleep early last night (before 11 p.m.). Mr Fitweiler believed him with no doubt and excused for her manner.I wrote this summary on HubPages as you can see. If you want to know more of HubPages and how you can make money on HubPages (like I do) can be read here.He told Mr Martin that Miss Barrows is suffering from psychological stress and that he also called his friend who was a psychiatrist that she should see him. Miss Barrows burst into the room, yelling that Mr Martin is lying that he was playing a game etc. She was taken out of the buildings by three people and was fired (most probably).More Short Story SummariesCommentsrawan on May 02, 2015:But why he said that its crazy planSlaven Cvijetic (author) from Switzerland, Zurich on December 03, 2013:thanks for sharing your thoughts!Do on November 23, 2013:I am married to a Mr. Martin type. What power to come across as such a predictable personality and in truth, no one is so innocent in life. Very much like the Pollos manager in Breaking Bad. Those personalities can literally get away with murder. The smartest people do stay out of prison for a reason. The ability to stay quiet is the most difficult skill, especially when others are annoying or cross you.Slaven Cvijetic (author) from Switzerland, Zurich on May 08, 2013:Hi englishteacher! Mr. Martin bought the pack of Camels on Monday night in the most crowded cigar store on Broadway. It was theatre time and seven or eight men were buying cigarettes. The clerk didn't even glance at Mr. Martin, who put the pack in his overcoat pocket and went out. If any of the staff at F & S had seen him buy the cigarettes, they would have been astonished, for it was generally known that Mr. Martin did not smoke, and never had. No one saw him. It was just a week to the day since Mr. Martin had decided to rub out Mrs. Ulgine Barrows. The term "rub out" pleased him because it suggested nothing more than the correction of an error--in this case an error of Mr. Fitweiler. Mr. Martin had spent each night of the past week working out his plan and examining it. As he walked home now he went over it again. For the hundredth time he resented the element of imprecision, the margin of guesswork that entered into the business. The project as he had worked it out was casual and bold, the risks were considerable. Something might go wrong anywhere along the line. And therein lay the cunning of his scheme. No one would ever see in it the cautious, painstaking hand of Erwin Martin, head of the filing department at F & S, of whom Mr. Fitweiler had once said, "Man is fallible but Martin isn't." No one would see his hand, that is, unless it were caught in the act. Sitting in his apartment, drinking a glass of milk, Mr. Martin reviewed his case against Mrs. Ulgine Barrows, as he had every night for seven nights. He began at the beginning. Her quacking voice and braying laugh had first profaned the halls of F & S on March 7, 1941 (Mr. Martin had a head for dates). Old Roberts, the personnel chief, had introduced her as the newly appointed special adviser to the president of the firm, Mr. Fitweiler. The woman had appalled Mr. Martin instantly, but he hadn't shown it. He had given her his dry hand, a look of studious concentration, and a faint smile."Well," she had said, looking at the papers on his desk, "are you lifting the oxcart out of the ditch?" As Mr. Martin recalled that moment, over his milk, he squirmed slightly. He must keep his mind on her crimes as a special adviser, not on her peccadillos as a personality. This he found difficult to do, in spite of entering an objection and sustaining it. The faults of the woman as a woman kept chattering on in his mind like an unruly witness. She had, for almost two years now, baited him. In the halls, in the elevator, even in his own office, into which she romped now and then like a circus horse, she was constantly shouting these silly questions at him."Are you lifting the oxcart out of the ditch? Are you tearing up the pea patch? Are you hollering down the rain barrel? Are you scraping around the bottom of the pickle barrel? Are you sitting in the catbird seat?" It was Joey Hart, one of Mr. Martin's two assistants, who had explained what the gibberish meant."She must be a Dodger fan," he had said."Red Barber announces the Dodger games over the radio and he uses those expressions--picked 'em up down South." Joey had gone on to explain one or two."Tearing up the pea patch" meant going on a rampage; "sitting in the catbird seat" means sitting pretty, like a batter with three balls and no strikes on him. Mr. Martin dismissed all this with an effort. It had been annoying, it had driven him near to distraction, but he was too solid a man to be moved to murder by anything so childish. It was fortunate, he reflected as he passed on to the important charges against Mrs. Barrows, that he had stood up under it so well. He had maintained always an outward appearance of polite tolerance."Why, I even believe you like the woman," Miss Paired, his other assistant, had once said to him. He had simply smiled. what are the advantages of reproducing sexually. why do we reproduce sexually
