The levenson self- report psychopathy scale

Levenson's Self-Relationship Psychopathy The instrument is one of the two subscales of the Levenson Auto-Report Psychopathy Scale (Levenson, M. R., Kiehl, K. A., & Fitzpatrick, C. M. (1995). The primary psychopathy scale of 16 articles evaluates antisocial behaviors found in typical students. Abstract The Levenson Self-Report Psycopathy Instrument (LSRPI) is one of the two subscales of the Levenson self-report scale. This subscale of the greatest instrument measures the degree to which participants relate affective and interpersonal characteristics that are callous, free of emotion, manipulative, grandiose and glib. These are the distinctive features of primary psychopathy based on the conceptualizations of Cleckley and Hare of the disorder. This measure was added to the Fast Track protocol in the year 13 (2003) for cohort 1. The primary psychopathy scale of 16 articles evaluates antisocial behaviors found in typical students. Each element is marked on a response scale from 0 to 3, where 0 = disagreement strongly, 1 = disagree somehow, 2 = agree a little and 3 = agree strongly. The variable names and names of the object are listed in Table 1. The bold elements on the table one must be converted into a standardized crude score through the reverse score. The variables that are reversed are C13BK10, C13BK12, C13BK14, C13BK15 and C12BK16. Once the elements are inverted or standardized, all elements are added to create a single measure of primary psychopathy, variable LP113LPP1. The SSRPI is appropriatea setting where time is limited. LLSRPI is commonly used as a measure of a single point of antisocial behavior. Conversion of reverse scores to standardized scores allows a significant comparison between sample groups and individuals within such groups. The sum of scores for each group allows comparison of average differences through t-test.
