Sample cover letter for pizza delivery driver

An activities director handles all aspects of planning corporate events for employees of a given company. Details include finding a space for an event, along with ordering beverages for guests and finding speakers or entertainment. A cover letter for an activities director's position must show relevant experience in planning relevant corporate events, so the potential employer feels comfortable in hiring a candidate to represent and execute company events. An activities director's cover letter starts by stating the name of the position being applied for. It must match the title provided by the employer, in case he is hiring for several similar titled positions, such as activities director, activities assistant or activities manager, for example. Being accurate with the title increases the evaluation process. The sentence after introducing the position must explain why the candidate is the proper fit, such as having a proven record of organizing successful corporate events. The majority of the cover letter explains why the applicant is the proper fit for the activities position offered by the company. The qualifications include having a set amount of years experience with event planning, expertise in tailoring events to meet the requirements of the company, getting the proper guest speakers or entertainment to maintain the professionalism of a business and planning events within the set budget allotted by the company executives. Address any requirements outlined in the job posting. The last paragraph briefly reminds the potential employer of why the applicant is the right fit for the activities position. The sentence must connect the needs of the company with the experience outlined in the list of qualifications presented in the previous paragraph. An example includes believing in providing useful events for company events that protects the company's reputation. The activities director's cover letter must also close with a call to action, whether it is the potential employer scheduling an interview or the applicant following up with the application evaluation. This last paragraph must provide a phone number or email address, if the applicant encourages the potential employer to contact him regarding an interview. A cover letter for an activities director must be written in a common cover letter format so the potential employer recognizes the applicant's professionalism. The cover letter starts with the name and contact information of the applicant on the top and center of the page. This information must be located in the same place on the accompanying resume. The name and the contact information of the potential employer must be located on the left-hand side above the professional greeting. The greeting must be "Dear" rather than "Hello." The writer of this cover letter works in marketing, so hopefully he's able to market for himself with a strong cover letter! As you'll see below, the applicant uses a list format to present his professional skills and draw direct connections with the job's requirements. Read on to see how the applicant describes his experiences, and then continue on to an analysis of what this sample cover letter does well. Thank you for your consideration. Sincerely, Bran Starkman Bran Starkman508-508-5080 bran.starkman@gmail.com Bran says he's skilled with content; did this skill come through in his cover letter? Marketing Manager Cover Letter: The Breakdown Bran took a bullet point approach to his cover letter, using a list to match the position's stated requirements with his own qualifications in a form that's sometimes referred to as an executive briefing. Visually, this format makes his letter easy to read and understand. He showed an understanding of the position by explicitly listing its requirements, and he provided specific examples of his professional accomplishments with data. Bran's measured approach seems to work well for the position of marketing manager, which also requires a high degree of organization and the use of metrics to measure impact. Bran's cover letter hits the four key features described in our cover letter guide - it's customized to the job at hand, it uses specific examples, it communicates enthusiasm, and it's highly readable. Bran includes his and the hiring manager's contact information at the top, so presumably he's sending his cover letter as a hard copy or Word document attachment. Hopefully, his cover letter will land Bran an interview with King Co. Before you check out more cover letter samples, consider the following important note on format. A Note on Format Before addressing the hiring manager, Bran provided a header with his name and contact information at the top of his cover letter. He also added the date and contact details of Ms. Lannister. This kind of formatting is traditional for cover letters, and it still works well if you're sending your letter by hard copy or as a Word attachment. Many jobs, though, expect you to paste your cover letter in the body of an email or in a text box on their application portal. If you're sending your letter this way, then you can usually leave off these headers. They're more applicable if you can format your letter with a certain look. If you're going the plain text body of email or text box approach, then you can just start right in with the salutation. As you finalize the look of your cover letter, consider how you're sending it, along with any application instructions. Then let that method guide your cover letter's final look! What's Next?
