The first apparent character in the development process towards Nami was Silk in Romance Dawn, Version 1, which was later followed by another girl named Ann in Romance Dawn, Version 2. Each of the girls had its personality that seemed to have been inserted into the general design of Nami. When Nami got angry with Arlong, he stabbed himself in the arm where his flag was with a knife several times. Even when the tattoo was removed, there was the scar. The new tattoo Nami replaced her old man, but she covered the scar. However, in the One Piece Loguetown Novel a Nami panel in a bathroom is seen with the scar left above to stab on the back, the new tattoo did not cover the scar at all. That scar also remains in Reverse Mountain Arc.is not shown in later arches. There is a possibility that this was an idea of early design, but the reason for the idea goes down is unknown. According to One Piece Green: Secret Pieces, Nami initially would have been a combat user. Gallery Nami showed with a scar in the bathroom scene of the novel One Piece Loguetown. However, since the Arlong Park Arc, nami has been subject to various modifications. the most common editing, as seen in the arch of Arabist when wearing a dress as a dancer, was to remove any split made visible from itsIn fact, all female characters had their neckline and the breast lines removed or strongly reduced. In line with this modification was the addition of a bathing suit on his body during the bath scene near the end of the arch. Another scene of the genre in which he used his "Happiness Punch" against the men who were pissing at her and Vivi from the wall separating the male and female baths. A big change saw the alteration Nami suffered was the absence of stabbing the tattoo on her left arm when she was angry with Arlong. In the FUNimation TV Edit dub version, these changes to Nami are not so restrictive, especially during the Skypiea Arch, where she wore a bikini top without breast changes. When Nami pretends to stab Usopp during the Arlong Park Arc, several changes were made in the 4Kids dub. Instead of revealing Nami didn't really stabbed Usagepp later, the dub immediately reveals that he's not going to hurt him. Besides, instead of stabbing, he asks for Usepp for his rubber knife, so it will seem that he stabbed it. Usepp is also informed of his plan, compared to the original version in which he was not aware of Nami's intentions. Nami's decision to renounce the $1,000,000,000,000 who agreed with Ilgaram to be the reward for delivering Vivi to Arabasta was changed to the FUNimation dub to let her say that she was disappointed that she was unable to get the money of the reward at the end. Nami's epithet (ネー, Dorobō Neko) can be translated as a cat thief, however it may also mean a womanHe steals men from other women. Trivia Nami's personal ride. Nami's post, wild roger. Nami's wild roger staff (post-timeskip) as detailed in One Piece Magazine. Nami has his wild roger, which has a blue and white bandage (which in some way corresponds to the model on the shirt that he wore in his initial appearance), an eye-catching, a tongue that protrudes, a hand that makes the sign "OK" (a Japanese hand movement that means money), Nami's hair and a star of diamond. The version depicted in One Piece Magazine adds its laying of logs and bangles to its hand. After the timeskip, a circle represents the entire skull instead of having the separate lower mouth and jaw, possibly to make her hair look longer to match Nami. The hair now is mossed instead of clean curls, combining even the wildest hair of Nami. The model on the bandanna has changed to match the model of the Nami bikini top worn in its initial appearance after the timeskip. The skull no longer squeezes and now wears earrings and the arm has its bangle and log position. It also has Nami's tangerina-ruota tattoo behind it. Names in a color walk 1. In One Piece Color Walk 1, many of Nami's habits are revealed before its character development in an early design that characterized its next Monkey D. Luffy and Roronoa Zoro: You can see you reclining on a deck chair before the crew had acquired a ship. Wear reading glasses, which occasionally uses later, like Skypiea's Arc. He took off his boots to get kicked. Nami tends to avoid wearing shoes, and in Chapter 96, it shows that Nami does not have shoes with her while she relaxes in her deck chair. He has a pencil instead of a pen. It was then revealed that he drew the graphs for Arlong in pen so much that he was absorbed by his blood. It is shown with a glass of wine as opposed to the normal glasses of Luffy and Zoro. Nami's drinking habits tend to be more tame than his crew mates, saving for the time when he was pushed to drink excess at the Whisky Peak. On the contrary, Zoro has two glasses of alcohol, putting particular emphasis on how much he loves to drink compared to Nami or Luffy (which only has a glass). Nami looking for a dress that looks like Nico Robin's debut appearance. In chapter 97, Nami can be seen trying some clothes. One of the outfits is almost identical to Robin's clothes in Arabasta, and her second outfit resembles that of Boa Hancock's prototypes. Nami is one of the few people to rely on with Luffy's straw hat when it is about to fight a strong or powerful enemy (the other is Usepp in combat at Davy Back Fight), as seen during the Arlong Park, Drum Island and Skypieawas also seen with his hat in different covers of the chapter. in the special episode one piece TV 2, he wore it almost all episode, similar to movie 2, clockwork island adventure.
