The number is probably quite small and decreasing. With many other promotional vehicles to choose from, including online advertising, public relations and direct marketing, small businesses do not have to select TV advertising as a way to communicate with their own target audience. In fact, there are a number of disadvantages for television advertising to which small businesses should take note before developing their marketing plans. The advantages and disadvantages of television advertising can vary based on what the business wants to reach. Before venturing into creating a television announcement for your small business, take the time to evaluate your goals for the promotion. If you are looking to reach a wide audience with a generic message, TV advertising could be a way to find success. However, if youÀ € it is interested in highly target the message as many companies are today, there are probably better ways to spend the marketing budget. One of the main counter advertising TV is lack of targeting. While TV advertising is an excellent way for companies to reach a large and varied audience, it is not an effective way to direct specific public segments that companies serve. With a lack of targeting, companies do not have the possibility of refining their messaging and make sure you are talking to the specific problems that the ideal customer is facing. Instead, with TV advertising, many organizations used to promote a more generic brand and product messages that do not also resonate. Furthermore, programming programs change often, so it can be difficult to plan your ad based on specific shows on key channels. Television advertisements have a difficult task: they must discuss the problems that the consumer is facing, demonstrates the value of yours o Service, differentiate it from competing offers and show the credibility of your company, all in a matter of 15-30 seconds. It is difficult to effectively communicate a lot of information in a long time. If a spectator takes and look at the entire commercial, which is rare in itself, it doesn't have much time to digest the information before the spot is over. The clarity of the message can easily get lost in the short amount of Dedicated to the announcement. It is not a secret that TV advertising is not economic. In fact, organizations can spend several hundred thousand dollars in creating and distributing an ad. Producing a commercial TV requires script writers, actors, cinematographic editors and advertising agencies. The production value is fundamental when trying to create an announcement that is distinguished and actually attracts consumer attention. The purchase of aerial air can be a complex art, since companies usually do not only give their advertising. Repetition is the key to obtain messages through TV, so organizations must carefully select where, when and how often to season their ads, which all are added to the budget department. The ads during leisure are significantly more than the announcements that run in the middle of the night, but also those are equipped with a large price tag. Many spectators do not enjoy watching advertising spots. Spectators often change the channel during a commercial pause. Some lower the volume during the advertising spots and take another activity, how to talk to the phone. Others use the commercial time to grab a snack or use the bathroom, entirely missing the advertisements. Moreover, these days, many people do not watch TV at all, streaming their shows online or looking at them on private media service providers à €
